

The start of a new year.

Set aside time to thoughtfully write a prayer for 2019. What does your heart hope for? Is there something stirring within you?

What does my heart hope for? What is stirring? Sadly & happily it's to put 2018 in my rear view mirror. We had THE event, but also several friends of ours had some tragedy as well. What stirs is the two things I invested in while going through a dark season. Almost immediately, I started writing a book and by summer I had most of it written. I want to get The Pharisee Factory published in 2019! The other is a thought, I've been doing funerals, weddings and hospital calls - responding to crisis with care my entire life. I wondered if I could build a an organization that allowed thousands of ministers to do the same and get paid for it. It would operate around an app where people could click for care - it's called hopenet, and I want to launch it in 2019. Lots of friends think it's a great idea and they're nice about it. A few think it's a real possibility. Those closest to me think I can't do it and can't see the possibility of it being a success. Now I know what it's like to have those closest to you not believe in you. But, I HAVE to try, even if it fails. It will take enormous amount of work, but it will only go if God is in it and He gives me favor.
