

“Your throne, O Lord, has stood from time immemorial. You yourself are from the everlasting past. Your royal laws cannot be changed. Your reign, O Lord, is holy forever and ever.” Psalms 93:2, 5 NLT

lectio // Psalm 93

Do I need a constant reminder that God is eternal, who has no beginning and no end? Yes, I do! The Psalmist uses this word immemorial, which is ancient. We might think of ancient like out dated old, but God does not age, get senile, slow down or tell the same joke 100 times. His wisdom, strength and knowledge do not deteriorate as time goes by. God lives outside of time. I wonder why Genesis doesn't mention time itself being created. I'm sure it has something to do with the rotation of the earth in regard to the sun. And, the last verse in the passage reminds us that God's royal laws never change as well. His laws as an extension of who God is, is eternal as well. This is so comforting to know.

oratio

Dad,

Your glory, power and wisdom, along with love are eternal and never lose their effectiveness in accomplishing your will. It is so mind-boggling. Thank you for being so steadfast and consistent when my life, our human lives do not feel consistent at all. It seems that our world and our existence is very much a chaotic battle of good verses evil, of love verses apathy and hate. Thank you Oh Lord for your everlasting goodness to us!

contemplatio

rest in the presence of God, allowing the words revealed to take root